Lesley Jarrett

Winnerjit Rathor

Internet Applications

April 14, 2021

LIB2024 Internet Applications

I will use my Internet Applications skills in a variety of ways. I hope to be a children's librarian. One of the more popular activities that various groups and libraries were offering before the pandemic involves getting children interested in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathmatics) related activities. I will be able to assist children with learning the basics of coding. Coding might help children gain interest in having a STEM related job in the future.

Outside of the children's department, I could help update the library's website.   Being able to update the library's website will allow people to gain up to the minute information on what the library offers. The pandemic has caused library patrons to use library websites more often. This trend will not likely change in the future. Coding will provide this vital link between information, libraries, and the public.

Overall, libraries are looking for a diverse skill set from their employees. My Internet Applications skills will be a benefit to my future career as a library technologist.